

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

May 20, 1998

S. 887

National Underground Railroad Network to Freedom Act of 1997

As ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources on May 13, 1998

Assuming appropriation of the authorized amounts, CBO estimates that the National Park Service (NPS) would spend less than $500,000 in fiscal year 1998 and about $1 million annually in subsequent years to carry out the requirements of S. 887. This legislation would not affect governmental receipts or direct spending; therefore, pay-as-you-go procedures would not apply. S. 887 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act of 1995 and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments.

S. 887 would require the NPS to establish a program to be known as the National Underground Railroad Network to Freedom. In order to implement this program, the NPS would produce and distribute educational materials, create and adopt an official symbol for the network, and provide technical assistance to other interested entities. Also for this purpose, the bill would authorize the agency to execute cooperative agreements or memoranda of understanding with such entities, including private organizations, other nations, and federal, state, or local government agencies. Finally, the bill would authorize appropriations to carry out these activities of $500,000 for fiscal year 1998 and $1 million for each year thereafter.

Based on information provided by the NPS, CBO estimates that the agency would spend about $500,000 to create the network in the first several months following enactment. This work would include basic planning, developing educational materials and interpretive exhibits, and coordinating federal activities with those of other interested groups or individuals. The NPS would use the $1 million authorized for each year beginning with 1999 to manage the network and provide assistance to other parties under cooperative agreements.
